89.
Physiological message is the most popular form of message we offer.↵ 90.                                     In this form of message, the starting point is the body's anatomical structure of bones, muscles, tendons and ligaments.↵ 91.                                     You will find that you massage in depth, and grips are often used to stretch and knead the muscle mass. The treatment is planned in consultation with you to find out your specific needs.↵ 92.                                     The intensity of the physiurgical message is also determined by the masseur in consultation with you.↵ 93.                                     Various disorders and disorders of the musculoskeletal system are treated, remedied and prevented. Physical massage is beneficial for low back and back pain, stiff neck, muscle fatigue and tension, tension headaches, mouse arm and many other ailments.↵
94.                                     The masseur also guides you in the performance of exercises that can prevent and relieve various types of pain and injuries in muscles and joints.↵
